Thoughts on Bagavad Gita: A Series of Twelve Lectures Read Before the Branch Theosophical, Vol. 1 (Classic Reprint) A. Brahmin

The lectures here offered to the public were written last year to be read on twelve consecutive Sundays before the Branch Theosophical Society at Kumakonum. Though the audience was small, it was regular. At the request of friends one of the lectures was again read before the last convention at Adyar. The nature and treatment of the subject interested the friends and sympathisers so much that they asked the writer to publish all the lectures. So it was resolved to publish them in the Theosophist. In accordance with that resolution, the first few pages of this book were published in the Theosophist; but here a new difficulty was experienced. The lectures which form a serial each depending on the preceding and supposing a knowledge of all that goes before for its own clear grasp were thought ill suited for publication in a monthly journal. Whether real or fancied, this was one of the reasons that prompted the publishers to embody the lectures in a book rather than allow them to see the light in the pages of the Theosophist. One other reason may be adduced since it was a factor in determining this course of publication and it is this. If the lectures are worth anything and capable of producing any the least effect on the public mind in a theosophical direction there is no reason why that effect should not be wrought at once without delay. Further it has often been represented that the cycle we are passing through, is one of the most critical in the history of the present race.
