It is designed to assist caring people and professionals – teachers, mental health experts, ministers, physicians – to understand negative reactions to handicapped persons by the general public. These stories will help parents and family members to understand the dynamics involved with handicapped children and adults.

The short stories portray interactions between able-bodied (ABs) and physically disabled people (gimps) in various settings. The characters and situations are drawn from incidents occurring in relationships between the handicapped, the people they love, and the people who love them as well as the casual passerby.
